Saint John Paul II Center for the New Evangelization

1300 SOUTH STEELE STREET, DENVER, CO 80210

Since 1905, the Catholic Church in Colorado has had a strong and indelible presence in southeast Denver at the site now known as the Saint John Paul II Center for the New Evangelization. The campus is home to more than 70 clergy, religious, and over 125 seminarians, as well as many essential archdiocesan facilities. Some of the key buildings include:

- Pastoral Center

Provides classrooms and workspace for several offices and ministries who serve the mission of the archdiocese. More than 140 people work on the campus full-time.

- Saint John Vianney Theological Seminary & Christ the King Chapel

The seminary forms the future priests of the archdiocese to live as holy men in the Church's mission of the New Evangelization.

- Redemptoris Mater Archdiocesan Missionary Seminary

Redemptoris Mater is one of 102 international diocesan seminaries of the Neocatechumenal Way that form men to be priests of the universal Church.

- Holy Trinity Center

A multi-purpose facility that provides apartments for priests, including the Archbishop and the Cardinal, and hosts a variety of meetings and gatherings.

- Cardinal Stafford Library

Named after J. Francis Cardinal Stafford, former Archbishop of Denver (1986-1996), the library serves as a religious, intellectual, and cultural resource in northern Colorado.
